

Special Guest Enjoys Riding Zip Line at Gatorland®

For Jennifer Lynn Adams the ride was a thrill of a lifetime. She just zip lined over a lake full of alligators and crocodiles, had a boa constrictor wrap itself around her, touched a tarantula and even wrestled a gator during her recent visit to Orlando's Gatorland® theme park. Amazing experiences for anyone. But for Adams, born with partial limbs, they are just more adventures to add to a long list of adaptive sports accomplishments such as surfing, water skiing, downhill skiing, inner-tubing, dancing and even aerial dancing. Jennifer Lynn Adams is a nationally recognized advocate for accessibility, inclusion and adaptive sports adventures. She was recently named a special ambassador for the Gatorland's Gator Gauntlet Wheelchair-Accessible Zip Line. The zip line ride is now accessible to park patrons with mobility challenges or other disabilities. "Riding Gator Gauntlet was a blast!" she exclaimed. "It was thrilling, picturesque and neat to see the alligators on either side of you. It's definitely great for anyone looking for an adaptive sports adventure."

Crowned Ms. Wheelchair America in 2014, Adams holds a Bachelor of Arts degree in Psychology and a minor in Vocal Performance from Pacific Lutheran University in Washington, a Master of Arts in Consulting from Faith Evangelical Seminary and a certificate in Applied Technology in Radio Broadcasting. Her motivational speaking company, SHIFT: Motivation Beyond Limitations, focuses on messages of acceptance and diversity, and her non-profit organization, Making Dreams Come True, provides opportunities and resources to people with extra abilities by organizing sports adventures through partnerships with various adaptive sports programs.

"We are thrilled to have Jennifer as our special ambassador to help us spread the word on the importance of providing attractions and experiences, like the Gator Gauntlet Zipline, that are accessible to more and more people," said Mark McHugh, Gatorland's president and CEO. "She is an amazing lady and everyone here at Gatorland has learned so much from her about the power of awareness, acceptance and inclusion. We are proud to support her and her non-profit organization, Making Dreams Come True. 🧩"
